

An Update on Our Response to Coronavirus (COVID-19)

To our clients and friends:

During these unprecedented times and challenging circumstances, I want to assure you that the attorneys at Ulmer are fully prepared to act quickly to support you and your organizations, pivot when needed, and help guide you in making difficult decisions.

In response to developments occurring across the country related to the fight against coronavirus, effective Monday Ulmer instructed our employees to work from home and only come into our offices as necessary. We will continue to remain open for business to ensure you have the effective legal counsel you need. However, for the safety of our clients and employees during this temporary arrangement, we want to greatly limit in-person meetings at our offices. If meeting in person is truly necessary, we urge you to use your best judgment when planning a visit to one of our offices, especially if you are not feeling well or may otherwise have been exposed to the virus, and all of our people are expected to take the same precautions.

Further, we are closely monitoring the outbreak and the corresponding challenges facing us all. Our attorneys are up-to-date, experienced, and knowledgeable in the legal issues arising from this pandemic, including labor and employment, wage and hour, tax, real estate, and insurance coverage issues. We will continually communicate with you regarding legal developments surrounding this pandemic. We will also publish timely alerts and release important updates to Ulmer.com that may be useful in keeping your organization moving forward. In the meantime, if you have any questions about the pandemic, please reach out to your relationship attorney who can help you navigate these issues.

By taking this significant step in social distancing for our employees and clients, we hope Ulmer can help the CDC and our local governments in keeping everyone safe while continuing to support our clients.

Scott P. Kadish, Managing Partner

Ulmer & Berne LLP
1660 West 2nd Street, Suite 1100
Cleveland, Ohio 44113

© 2020 Ulmer & Berne LLP, Attorneys at Law. All rights reserved.

